Network of Journals of National Societies.

Tom Glomsaker

What do we do?
Network of Journals of National Societies.

- There has to be an initiative from the Journals and the National Societies themselves.

- The "coordinator" of this work should be an editor with connections.
Network of Journals of National Societies.

My proposal is that we send a list with addresses (or a link to our homepage) to the National delegates and to all the editors, and say that we have collected a list over editors and Journals and there is an opportunity to cooperate in issues, which are of interest.
Issues of interest?

• Cooperation in publishing interesting articles from other countries and discuss education, specialist training, health political questions etc.

• Dividing experiences in developing a National Journal.

• Some Journal will perhaps be interested in having a page for experiences from other National Societies.

• A network could be good for getting in contact with people in whole Europe and also have somebody to ask for referees etc.

• If a Journal need articles to special topics, a network could be of importance.

• The editors could of course define themselves, what the network can be used for.

The address list has to be continuously updated and the national delegates and editors must be responsible for sending this information to the office in Brüssel.
